The face of church and ministry management software is changing! It first changed from green text screens to colored text screens, and then to graphical user interfaces. Now it's changing again— this time to web browsers!

There are some great opportunities that come with browser-based databases:

- They can be accessed by almost any computer that can run a browser, eliminating many computer platform restrictions.
- They may be made securely available over the internet, whether you host them on your internal network or they're hosted by an ASP.
- You may be able to create custom browser pages that are processing forms, modeled after your data-collection forms. This could streamline the input process when, for instance, you have a new visitor that needs to be entered into the database.

Why Church and Ministry Management Software?

Many of the systems on the following pages match the sophisticated needs churches and ministries have. Tracking more than just names, addresses, and phone numbers, many of these also track talents, interests, attendance, contributions, etc. Churches and ministries also exist in a unique accounting niche that most software (and even CPA's!) can't help us with: net asset (fund) accounting. But many of these packages can help in this area.

Church and ministry offices can be stressful environments due to the many deadlines that must be met by an administrative staff typically smaller than what would be found in a secular business. Church and ministry management software, if well written, can be a soothing balm in these settings. If it's powerful, capable, fast, and stable, the ministry team can rely on it to help them get the most possible work done with minimal time and stress.

Church Management Software Defined

Some years ago Steve Hewitt, Editor-in-Chief of Christian Computing Magazine, labeled the software category that is tailored to meet the needs of the churches as "Church Management Software," or CMS. Following is a well-researched list of all CMS providers at the time of this writing.

The field has narrowed considerably since we first compiled it in 1987. That first list included 262 CMS providers! Today there are less than fifty. The following list includes those that are actively developing their software to meet church and ministry needs.

We've tried to give you as comprehensive a list as possible in a quick format of those CMS functions that ministry teams request most often. In addition, we've given you information such as how to reach them, how long they've been serving the ministry community in this way, how many ministries they currently serve, their technical support hours, and how often they update their software. All of the information was provided by the CMS providers.

Happy Hunting!

Shop wisely. We counsel all of our clients to check with current users of the software and ask questions like:

- Does the software do what was promised?
- Is their technical support team capable and available?
- If you were faced with the same decision today, what would you do differently?

Please feel free to contact any of the providers listed. They would love to help you in your ministry. Happy hunting!

Explanation of Chart

The chart is a compilation of responses from the software providers. The ■ symbol is used on those options they said are currently available and that they provide directly. The ☒ symbol is used on those needs they meet through an outside (third party) source with one exception: some rely on QuickBooks for their accounting. QuickBooks' capabilities are indicated with the © symbol.
